Lahaina Beer Sellers

Lanaina, March 18th, 1887. EDITOR GAZETTE: Lot was here last week and he called on the beer sellers and moved the previous question by turning out all their beer (as he supposed). On that night he returned to Honolulu. The next day was Sunday, the beer sellers moved a reconsideration and it passed by a large majority. The result was a great many drunks. Lot thinks he is smart, but the Lahaina beer sellers think they are smarter.

There was a grand luau given by Mr. and Mrs. James Campbell on the 17th inst., at their residence in Lahaina on the birthday of two of their children. The tables were loaded with the choicest viands; even the most fastidious could not complain, and many were the wishes that birthdays might come oftener than once a year. HEMLOCK.

On Saturday night the Marsnal, with a posse of police, made a much-needed raid the Kapiolani bath house, situated at Kakaako. On entering the building there was a general stampede of those inside, who took to the shallow water and escaped. The proprietor, C. Molteno, was captured, and a varied assortment of wines and liquors was found on the premises, with glasses, etc., be-sides a hula outfit. Molteno was arrested, charged with keeping a disorderly house, and on Sunday was liberated on $500 bail. On Sunday forenoon Frank May, of Queen street, received a visit from the Marshal and his sids, who succeeded in unearthing a varied lot of drink, from whisky down to "swipes," all of which was confiscated and brought to the station house. The charge set against May's name was selling liquor without a license. He was also bailed out.

The Hawaiian Kingdom.

When the Hawaiian Kingdom sinks so low in the scale that its nearest neighbors speak of it in derision and disgust, is it not high time to put the little ship of State on the other tack, and seek to undo the mischief already well under way? Put aside all irivolities, and the worse than useless squandering of the public funds for low and worthless obects, which only gratify the vanity of a select few, while objects of prime necessity for the benefit of the whole country are allowed to go by default. Furs and feathers seem to be the order of the day here, and this feature of the question is shown up in brilliant colors to Hawaiia's disadvantage, in the San Fran-cisco Daily Empirer of March 6th, by a correspondent, who hits off the foibles of the day in graphic style, and with a tren chant pen. It ought to make the authors of these senseless follies hang their heads with very shame at this exposure—that is, if they have any left, which is doubtful. For obvious reasons the article cannot be repro-dueed here, and the edition of the paper in on was soon exhausted after being placed on sale.

The Amateur Minstrels.

gentlemen connected with the Hono lulu Yacht and boat Club gave two entertain-ments last week, on Thursday and Saturday evenings. The performance throughout may be characterized as thoroughly good and in some cases as really excellent.

On each evening the performance com-menced with chorus singing and solos. The chorus was well trained, admirably balanced and gave thorough satisfaction to the audi ence. The overture, "Merry War," was well rendered and followed by Mr. Holl's "Susan Jane," which took the house immensely. "A. Scotch Lassie," by Mr. John Bright, called forth an encore. Mr. Bishop's "I Must Go." created a good deal of nonsement. Mr. C. Denovant received great applause and an en-core for the "Virginia Rosebud." Mr. Dene-vana has a fine tenor voice, clear and pleasant vans has a fine tenor vance, clear and pleasant to the ear. In the chorus, Mr. Bright's voice was particularly noticeable. Mr. Hoog's "Hash Little Baby," was very amusing, and was sung with great spirit. Mr. H. W. Morse gave "Tis but a Little Faded Flower," his fine deep notes telling well. Mr. W. G. Armstrong's "Keep a Movin" created quite a furnix, to which the same gentienan replied with "Mary's Gone With a Coon," and thoroughly delighted his audience. The whole performance concluded with a clever local sketch ing the soure caused by the renowned burglar Chun Hook. This sent the audience home thoroughly delighted

I hear that 300 Chinese passports were signed last week at the Foreign Office, These passports are to be forwarded to China for returning Celestials. Nosbig scooped in, at $10 each, $3,000, and is likely to give a lusu soon. I shall try to get the peddling of licenses, for I hear that a Chinaman in town makes a good thing out of it, and in Hong kong return passports for intending emigrants are worth $40 a piece. Oh, my wouldn't I like a job of this kind—there's

I attended No. 4's luan on St. Patrick's Day, and had a lively time. Lots of the big wigs were there, including the Grand Duke Everybody's health was drunk, and a game of enchre was played to see who was to prepare the next toast-it fell to the lot of Bliff., who proposed the health of the Governmor of Desan Island, Of course I responded, and rought the house down-the Grand Duke patting me on the back, said, "Bully boy, hurry up your uniform, and be ready when the Conundrum sails." Oh, don't I feel grand—weigh a ton or less. A vote was then put and carried, that the company "take a rest," which we did. Wheelbarrows had been ordered, and the company retired in good order. I Col. Bottle presided with dignity. The pile of dead marines lying around loose was wonderful.

I have missed Grisley from the dockyard lately. Can it be possible that he has been "shelved"? I do not think so-how will the navy get along without him? It can't, sir. That Bo'sun played the Admiral a mean trick, just after Grisley had him hauled up for assaulting him—why, the Bo'sun swore out a warrant against the Admiral for affray, and had him yanked before the "Beak" like any common plug, and in default of bail they were going to put the Admiral in one of those cells where they stow away the common drunks. The idea of committing this inlightly upon the Admiral of the Fleet,—but House are always "putting their foot in it -thought he was a Chinaman-the idea The whole town just turned out, and bailed the Admiral for all he was worth. Oh, there will be a big naval court martial soon.

I had a little confab with my old friend "Holy Moses," asking him what he was doing since John "fired" him from the Custom House. "Oh," says Moses, "I am chief of the Kahunas, and have lots of money." I told Moses I thought he had "struck it rich." He said, "you bet, it knocks Chatham street sky high. I got $50 for easting Nosbig's horoscope, and a beautiful one it was; the old man just pungled down like a prince. I never get less than $100 from the Grand Duke, and the Kahunas begin to think I am ——— well, no matter. I have a large list of engagements abead. I will cast Heep Savey's horoscope next week, and it will be a daisy, too." Moses told me lots of news-how he has to get up in the middle of the night to interpret dreams, cast horoscopes, and the like, and I must excuse him if he did not stop all day. I said, "certainly," and the old man sham-bled off, not before he promised to make me 'solid" with the Grand Duke, and get me a

We all met on Friday at the Clearing House for street talk, and there being noth-ing particular on the board we adjourned to Seaborn Luce's to see if the steamer was telegraphed, when, bless you, we dropped onto one of the softest snaps of the season. There was Seaborn and Luning getting a keg of that Philadelphia beer line, and the boys standing around. Says Bliff., "what's up now?" "Oh," says Lun-"just wait a minute, and you'll find "Sure enough, we did. Oh, such "smiling" faces you rarely see, and under the inspiration of the beer, they all began to talk-Mont. recited a poem, the Major gave a short essay on military tactics and the proper way to make a flank movement on the side-board, while Luning favored the company with a short history of how to successfully manage a comedy troupe, interlarded with extracts from the School for Scandal, which brought the house down convulsed with laughter. To cap the climax, Luning undertook to dance the "can can," and was sucoseding beyond our expectations, when at-tempting the lofty act of kicking the Major's eigar out of his mouth without touching his nose, he lost his balance and came down with a fearful crash into a pyramid of sample bottles, wrecking the whole lot and nearly cooking his goose into the bargain. We rescued him from the debris and carried him carefully into the yard and let the water run onto him, which soon revived him, when we all made tracks the short cut to Fort street.

Last week I overlooked Gawge's letter to me from London, about the loan. Gawge says they are beginning to "sour" on the bubble, and want the whole Dukedom as wife to the house of a Japanese, on Emma security, because your Grand Dukedom as wife to the house of a Japanese, on Emma street, named Hatch, who speaks English, worth a cent. Numerous brass better worth a cent. Numerous brass buttons and caps for the "army and navy," election gin.

Gawge caps that the Fierseial Critic, in one to Mowriama's house and arrested him. also says that the Financial Critic, (a one horse London paper) has just published a long account about things in the Dukedom, and it hits the truth exactly—how the Grand Duke just "whooped her up" at the Coronation racket, and the Samoan annexation scheme, and the fitting out of the navy, which Johnny Bull looks upon as a standing menace to his future progress in the Pacific Gawge says, with Hawaii on the one side and Russia on the other, Johnny is completely "sandwiched," and it is a question of "die dog or eat the axe," and Johnny has woke up to the exigencies of the situation. and is arming some of his old "dug outs" for the Pacific, but just wait until the great "Connadrum," with her new flying jibboon and "reefed smoke stack," gets a glimpse of them, with the gallant Admiral Grisley perched in the mizzen top, they will hunt their holes in short metre. Gawge says if the loan don't hang fire, and Von Boss don't get on the high borse about those paltry $500,000 of his, he will come out all right, and he will be able to send on a large invoice of water pipe, which will sell well on the beach. Gawge says its best to go slow

I had not time last week to tell you about the gay time Bliff, and I had at the luan given by the Kilokilo or Ball of Twine Society on Saturday. I tell you it was "mobby," and Bliff, and I had all the fun we a basket of champagne, including a good supply of "square face." Well, we all set to with a will, and you ought to have seen now we made things fly. I had a seal next to Billy Kaluni, who thinks he is something of a high chief, you know, and who kept the waiters busy filling glasses, until he began to think he was the Grand Duke himself. Pretty soon we adjourned to the large hall to brow the ball of twine, and Billy Kalnni called on Bliff. and I to follow, which we did. Billy dropped his weary limbs into the chair intended for the Grand Duke, which highly displeased him, and he lost mo time in letting Billy Kaluni know it. too. Oh, you ought to have seen the Grand Duke—he looked like a cyclone boiled down into a double-breasted typhoon, with chainlightning sticking out all over. "Hoop La," valled the Grand Duke, and waltzing earthquake," the Grand Duke caught him on the other ear, which made Billy think the world was coming to an end. By this time they had both approached the door, when the Grand Duke, with a superhuman effort the Grand Duke, with a superhuman effort swung a No. 14 boot under Billy Kaluni's cause of his mability to move? But what cost tail, landing him well out in the yard, can be said of the Marshal and his judgthat had kicked him. We assured him it was not a mule which had kicked him, but the Grand Duke himself. Oh, my, wasn't Billy scared when he found out what had happened—he just wilted, and asked Bliff, and I to put him in his "little bed." Bliff, and I thought it would not be healthy for us to go in again, so we quietly took off our yellow capes, slid over the fence and home. I tell you it ain't healthy to fool with the Grand Duke, when he is bossing the Kilokilo Society.

Emperor William's Birthday.

To-day the 22d, is the 90th birthday of the venerable Emperor William of Germany. The German residents in and about Honolulu will celebrate the occasion in an appropriate manner. The Band also contributed several popular airs to the occasion at Emma Square last evening.

The Honolulu Rifles-

Next Friday evening the 25th, the Rifles give an exhibition drill, to be followed by a hop, at their armory, corner of Beretania and Punchbowl streets. A large number of invitations have been issued, and the affair romises to be one of the grand social events of the season. The committee comprises Lieut. W. Unger, Sergt, C. F. Bishop, Corp. F. L. Winter, Corp. C. T. Wilder and private Hugh Gunn.

The Doctors

The Board of Health has made the following appointments, which appear in the Gov-ernment Gazette of the 14th, viz: Dr. Arthur Mouritz to be permanent resident physician at the Leper Settlement. Molokai. Rolando Kuehn to be Government physician, Island of Molokai.

Dr. albert B. Carter to be Government resident physician for the district of Waia-lua, and Koolauloa, Oahu. Dr. S. E. Craddock to be Government physician for the districts of North and South Kona, Hawaii.

Dr. F. B. Hutchinson.

From the New Zealand Times we see that Dr. F. B. Hutchinson, an old resident of Honolulu, has been elected a second time President of the Wellington Philosophical Society. In the same paper is an account of the Star Boat Club's swimming races. Among the swimmers are the names of Dr. Hutchin son's two sons. Frank Hutchinson won the yard race, the obstacle race and third for the 150 yards race. George Hutchinson was third in all the above races. As both lads learned to swim in Kapena Pool this is a triumph for Hawaii in New Zealand.

Kamehameha III's Birthday.

Thursday last being "St. Patricks Day in the morning," and also the birthday of Ka-mehameha III., was duly observed by the Hawaiian Government offices being closed, and the flying of banting from the government and consular flag staffs in the city. A salute was fired at noon. The only company which publicly celebrated the day was No. 4 Engine Co., which "whooped her up" in grand style—the "boys" had a "'big time, judging from the number of dead marines" laid outside of their engine house on Friday morning-nearly a dray load. No. 4 knows how to celebrate a holiday in true Hawaiian style, and cannot be discounted by any other nationality.

Island Boys in Boston.

It is always pleasing to hear of our Island Boys doing well abroad. We have to hand the order of exercises of the 59th Annual exhibition of the Chauncy-Hall School and among those who took part are five Hawaiian William H. Lewers, son of Mr. Robert Lewers was one of the prize speakers and re-cited " 'Olaf the Sea King' for which he received great praise. Oliver Carter, son of Mr. J. O. Carter took part in a reading of the "Battle of Roncesvalles" and also in the sword drill. Masters F. A. Knudsen, E. A. Knudsen and A. S. Knudsen, sons of Mr. Valdimir Knudsen of Kauai, also took part in the reading exercises. Channey-Hall School is a celebrated institution and our young fellow countrymen meet there some of the best material in the United States as competitors. As they are highly praised for their efforts it speaks well for their early training here. Among the directors of the Institution we notice the name of Mr. James W. Austin, who was for many years a resident on these Islands, and who will be remembered by most of our older residents.

Stabbing Affray.

On Wednesday evening a stabbing affray occurred in Fowler's yard between two Japanese, named Mowriama and Itchnorsy. It seems they had been indulging in bottle of samshu, and a dispute arising, when Mowriama arose and kicked his wife, who was present, and then threw a large knife at Itchnorsy, inflicting a severe wound in the wound. Itchnorsy was conveyed on a stretcher to the Queen's Hospital. The wounded man bled profusely at the house and while on the way to the Hospital, and persisted in sitting up sapported by a policeman. On removing the bandage the doctor discovered a gaping wound an inch-and-half long; and which had penetrated the lungs. After a few stitches had been taken and the wound bandaged, the patient began to rally, and with a better pulse than when he first examined him at Hatch's house, besides feeling warmer.

Marshal Kaulukou took the sufferer's ante mortem statement, which was translated by The whole trouble seems to have been caused by a fit of jealousy on the part

The weapon, by which the wound was in-flicted could not be found, and the prisoner refused to disclose what he had done with it. Later or in the night Mowriams was detected in an attempt to strangle bimself, and a guard was placed over him to prevent any further attempts. Dr. Trousseau stated that the wounded man's chances of recovery were hopeful.

Brutality.

On Friday evening a man named McCarthy, while wending his way along King street near Nunana street, accidentally fell into a hole, could by to. We all had yellow capes and looked as if the small-pox was around. After going through some motions at the boat boase we marched up to the luan, where there was everything from a fricassed dog to with his broken leg, where the Marchal satis-fied himself that the man was perfectly sober and that his leg was also broken. Instead of ordering a carriage, which humanity would dictate under the circumstances, the Marshal directed two policemen to shoulder the unfortunate man and carry him to the Que Hospital. A humane man would not have treated a favorite dog in the same manner. As the policemen trundled along with their burden, the man's cries and groens attracted the attention of the bystanders, who asked why a carriage was not used, or a stretcher: the answer was that they were obeying the Marshal and they were going to carry out orders if it killed the man, and requesting the bystanders to mind their own business. On reaching Hotel street, the poor man's groans attracted the attention of Sain. Lederer, who appeared to be more humane than the relied the Grand Duke, and waiting up to the balf conscious Billy, dealt him a "biff" others who witnessed the cruel spectacle, and the balf time to ask, "was that an and settled the question by ordering and and settled the question by ordering and paying for a carriage for the three out of his own pocket.
